

A Study on Construction Project Management before and after Real Estate Regulation Act, (RERA) 2016

Rajesh Mikkili, V. Sree Lakshmi, Venkatesh Kone.

Abstract: Real Estate business at present has become a havoc /nightmare for the customers who are investing in Real estate. There are numerous cases of poor quality, increased cost and delay in projects of construction with respect to client and customer which results in loss of resources. To eradicate these issues, the government has proposed to implement RERA Act in India on May 1st 2016. The main purpose of this act is to protect home-buyers and also to help the real estate industry for investments, provide transparency of transactions and improve the quality of construction. But this act is not being implemented all over India due to various factors. This paper tries to study the factors affecting implementation of RERA, advantages and comparison of RERA implemented building with conventional building by taking a live construction as a case study in Andhra Pradesh. The paper highlights the use of RERA, its benefits and proposes RERA act as mandatory tool/norm for improving the quality and life of building in concern with the customer.

Index Terms: RERA, Havoc, Eradicate, Transparency, Implement, Comparison, Conventional Building.

I. INTRODUCTION

The Real Estate (Regulation and Development) Act, 2016 is an Act of the Parliament of India which attempts to guarantee home-buyers similarly as help bolster interests in the land business. This law makes compulsory for builders to post all the information of the problems like project plan, layout, government approvals, land title status, sub-contractors to the project, scheduled for completion with the State Real Estate Regulatory Authority (RERA) and then in effect pass this information on to the consumers. The current practice of selling on the basis of uncertain built-up area for a real estate project will come to a stop, as this law makes it banned. The area of carpet has been clearly defined in this law. The maximum term of jail for a developer who doesn't obey the order of the appellate panel of the RERA is 3 years with or without a fine. Currently, the developer does not suffer in any way even if the project is delayed. Now, the law ensures that any delay in project completion will make the developer liable to pay the same interest as the EMI being paid by the consumer to the bank back to the consumer[4]. The developer cannot make any changes to the plan that had been sold without the written consent of the buyer. This practice by developers puts paid to a common and disliked to increase the cost of projects. Every project measures more than 500 square meters or more than eight apartments will have to be registered with the RERA. The law commands every developer to keep 70% of company from every project in separate Bank Account.
